Good crop of 2009 calves!
We have Steers, Heifers and Bulls.

The BueLingo Beef Cattle Society has as its primary objectives the development, registration and promotion of the BueLingo breed of cattle, in the United States of America and throughout the world.

Take a closer look at this unique breed! Whether black or red belted, thick or thin, it is the distinctive White Belt encircling the body that people notice first. The belt is a definite marketing device, but it's the animals production of Good Tasting Beef that has spurred the rapid and continued growth and interest in the BueLingo beef breed.

BueLingo are a composite beef breed that began with the Dutch Belted as their base and incorporated many other bloodlines into their breeding.

Russell Bueling of North Dakota, along with Alfred Ostrum conceived the breed some 40 years ago with the assistance of Russell Danielson of North Dakota State University's Animal Science Department. These men realized the need for a breed of cattle able to efficiently produce good tasting beef and set out to create the ideal beef factory. The breed's founders followed a planned program to develop a breed that met the needs of the professional cattlemen - beef herds that were hardy and economical to maintain, showed high fertility, fast growth, lean carcasses and outstanding carcass merit...all important for a profitable farm or ranch operation.

In 1988, Bueling incorporated the BueLingo Cattle Society in North Dakota with 200 animals in the original foundation. Now there are BueLingos from Canada to Texas.

BueLingos are known for having a generally gentle disposition. This is a young breed with a proud history and there are many opportunities for you to participate in the future development of the BueLingo Beef Cattle.
